Art Unit: 1742

1. The Examiner acknowledges that not all pending claims were addressed in the Rejection of 7/6/05. A new rejection correcting this Action is made at this time.

2. The text of those sections of Title 35, U.S. Code not included in this action can be found in a prior Office action.

3. Claims 1-3 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Prasad US Pat. 4,459,263 (Prasad '263) in view of Prasad et al. US 2002/0004018 (Prasad et al.) and DE 4123606 (DE'606)

Prasad '263 discloses at col. 2, lines 56-68 the invention substantially as claimed.

Prasad '263 discloses a cobalt alloy comprising:

20-30% Cr;

0-6.5 % Mo;

0-15% W;

0-1.5% Mn; and remainder Co.

Prasad '263 is silent as to Si and Ta additions, and the amount of impurities including nitrogen.

Prasad et al. teaches to add Si and Ta to Co alloys in the same field of endeavor to improve the corrosion resistance, to lower melting temperature and to strengthen the alloy.

Art Unit: 1742

Both Prasad '263 and Prasad et al. disclose compositional ranges that overlap those as claimed by Applicant establishing a prima facie case of obviousness. Prasad '263 further discloses at Table 2, composition 6, wherein the amount of W is 10% and the amount of Mo is 2%.

It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art to add Ta and Si as taught by Prasad et al. to the invention of Prasad '263 in order to improve corrosion resistance, lower melting temperature and to strengthen the alloy.

DE'606 teaches to add N in an amount above 0.15% in the same field of endeavor for the purpose of improving the repeated heating without deterioration of the alloy.

It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill to add N in an amount of above 0.15% in order to improve the repeated heating without deterioration of the alloy.

It would be obvious to minimize the amount of impurities to less than 0.1% as known in the art to improve the performance of the alloy.

4. Claims 4-6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Prasad US Pat. 4,459,263 (Prasad '263) in view of Prasad et al. US 2002/0004018 (Prasad et al.) and DE 4123606 (DE'606), and further in view of Ingersoll et al. Prasad '263 in view of Prasad et al. and De'606 disclose the invention substantially as claimed (see paragraph 3 above).

However, Prasad '263 in view of Prasad et al. and De'606 do not disclose casting methods for forming the alloy into veneers and crowns.

Art Unit: 1742

Ingersoll et al. teaches that dental alloys can be cast in the same field of invention for the purpose of forming crowns and veneers.

It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to use a casting technique as taught by Ingersoll et al. in the invention of Prasad '263 in view of Prasad et al. and De'606 in order to form veneers and crowns.
